Part One: Child-Directed Narrated Play
Child-Directed Narrated Play Promotes Positive Relationships

To Do:

- PLAY for 10 minutes twice each day with your child. Get in your child’s attention spotlight and be child directed; express your joy to your child when playing.
- RECORD your experiences on the “Parent Child-Directed Play” record sheet and bring to the next session.
- USE visual prompts and choice activity board for children with limited language.

To Read:

- Chapter 1, Toddler-Directed Play in Incredible Toddlers book
- OR
- Chapter 1, How to Play With Your Child, in The Incredible Years book

Spotlight your child’s successes
• Position your play carefully so you can have face-to-face contact with your child without too much distance.
• Reduce distractions by turning off the TV, computer, phones and limit other people present.
• Be child-directed and play with your child’s favorite activity.
• Follow your child’s focus of attention or theme during play.
• Observe and respond to your child’s nonverbal initiations; avoid instructions, corrections, and questions—curb your desire to give too much help.
• Describe and narrate what your child is doing with simple words or short phrases and joy (like a sportscaster).
• Model and imitate your child’s actions, words and sounds with enthusiasm and entertainment; offer to help.
• When your child stops interacting with you, seems disinterested, or is engaged in repetitive and obsessive actions, offer another favorite joint activity or change the action slightly with a new idea, song, funny gesture or sound effects and sensory routine.
• Encourage your child to look at you by putting a desired object next to your face and wait for a response. E.g., “What do you want me to do now?”
• Reinforce your child for looking at you with smiles, praise, laughter and by giving him or her the desired object. Be an “enthusiastic audience.”

Remember: Your child is not deliberately trying to exclude you. She/he just doesn’t know how to interact yet.

Spotlight your child’s successes
The key aspects for promoting language expression in children who have little sound or language production is the following:

- Try to get face-to-face contact and gain your child’s attention before talking.
- Use simple, short sentences to describe and narrate what your child is doing, seeing and experiencing; label their actions and objects. Limit instructions and questions. Follow your child’s lead.
- Wait and pause for your child’s turn to respond with a gesture, or look, or word before speaking and narrating again.
- Imitate and repeat your child’s sounds, gestures, behaviors, and words (sound effects such as animal or engine noises help promote sound production).
- Try to sustain back-in-forth verbal interchange as long as your child is interested by reinforcing verbal and nonverbal responses.
- If your child is just speaking with one word, start by adding a second word. Keep it simple, slow down, and build repetition.
- Combine your words with gestures and songs and imitate your child’s words and actions.
- Narrate your child’s activities during play times as well as daily routines such as mealtimes, bedtime, dressing, teeth brushing, diapering and while in the car or bus.

Note: You don’t need to focus on describing numbers, letters and colors for children who are just beginning to talk. These can be described once your child can name some basic objects and actions.

Coaching Children’s Reading Readiness

- Read at a quiet time when you are relaxed and comfortable—with TV and music turned off (this prevents over stimulation).
- Read for a few minutes each day when your child seems calm and alert.
- Place your child in front of you during reading so you have face-to-face contact when possible.
- Adapt reading to your child’s stage of communication.
- Use physical hand signals, pointing gestures, sign language, and animal sounds when looking at pictures.
- Respond immediately to your child’s verbalization or gestures.
- Prompt and imitate your child’s word use.
- Re-read books your child likes many times. Read slowly. Be animated.
- Praise and give positive feedback (that’s right!).
- Slide your finger under the words or letters on the page and show left to right movement. Draw attention by guiding child’s finger under words you read.
- Encourage your child to turn the pages and choose a book he/she is interested in. Let child fill in blanks.
- Choose interactive books with flaps, buttons to push and textures - simple plots and daily routines.
- Create books for your child with photos and magazine pictures.
- End reading with repetitive “all done” signal.

Getting in your child’s attention spotlight!
Pre-Academic Coaching Promotes Children’s Language Skills

- Notice what your child is giving attention to and talk about it.
- Describe the objects, shapes, numbers, letters and colors of things your child plays with; avoid questions.
- Listen to your child and imitate or mirror, your child’s sounds and/or words.
- Talk about positions of objects (e.g., inside, under, beside, next to, behind).
- Describe your child’s actions, body parts, and clothing.
- Prompt your child to communicate by modeling words for him/her to copy.
- Use new and more complex words to expand your child’s vocabulary even if you know (s)he won’t understand at first.
- Chant, sing rhymes and teach your child body movements that go with the words.
- Describe your own actions to your child (e.g., “I’m folding three shirts and two pairs of red socks now).
- Describe your child’s actions during everyday activities such as dressing, eating, or getting ready for bed.
- Match real objects with words and pictures.

“The blue block is next to the yellow square, and the purple triangle is on top of the long red rectangle.”

“You are putting on your blue sweater on top of your white t-shirt. It will keep your body warm.”

SPOTLIGHTING

Persistence Coaching Promotes Children’s School Readiness Skills

- Coach with comments when your child is working hard, concentrating, being calm, or staying patient when doing an activity.
- Describe your child’s persistence with a frustrating activity by trying again, sticking with it, thinking of a new way to do it, staying focused.
- Listen carefully and try to understand what your child is telling you about his/her thoughts, ideas and discoveries.
- Comment and praise your child for listening to you or a peer or sibling.
- Encourage your child to discover, explore, experiment and provide support when mistakes are made.
- Try not to give too much help; encourage your child’s verbal and/or non-verbal responses to other children or adults.

“You are working so hard on that puzzle and thinking about where each piece will go. You are concentrating!”

“You are so patient and just keep trying to use your spoon.”

“You have figured our how to put on your shoes all by yourself.”

“You are staying calm and trying to ask him for the truck again.”

One-on-One Parent-Child Social Coaching

- During play, model social skills for your child such as offering to share, waiting, taking turns, asking for help, pointing or gesturing, smiling, eye contact, and praising.
- Prompt your child to ask for help, take a turn, share something, or respond to a friend’s request and then praise him/her if it occurs. Let it go if your child does not respond to your prompt.
- Enthusiastically praise your child any time s/he offers (verbally or nonverbally) to share, help, responds to a request, or gives eye contact.
- Participate in pretend and make-believe play with your child by using a doll, action figure, or puppet to model skills such as asking to play, offering to help, taking a turn, giving a compliment, calming down with a deep breath and waiting.
- Model and prompt by suggesting to your child the appropriate words to say. For example, “You can say, ‘I want the truck, please.’”

Parent Prompt Examples:

“I will be your friend and share this with you.”

“Can you help me find a blue one?”

“You are a good friend for helping me.”

Getting in your child’s attention spotlight!
Face-to-face sensory physical routines can motivate your children to interact and laugh and have fun interacting with you for longer periods of time. This means you will have optimized your child’s energy level and increased learning opportunities for more durable social learning. Here are some tips for increasing your fun factor with your child.

When your child seems withdrawn, uninterested, unresponsive or bored increase his energy and motivation as follows:

- Exaggerate your fun responses and gestures with big smiles, laughter, silly faces, tickles, funny noises and bigger voices with more emotion: draw attention to your face.
- Play games such as peek-a-boo and name the hidden object, or pattycake, finger play, or build a fort in your living room.
- Determine your child’s favorite rhythmic song or physical game such as Ring around the Rosy, When You’re Happy and You Know It, the Chase Me Game or rough housing. Use song choice cards to help child make choice of song.
- Surprise your child occasionally with a variation of routine such as new sound effects, new verse, or new steps.
- Pause or freeze sensory routine often to prompt your child to signal you for what he or she wants next.
- Once you get the signal (verbal or nonverbal), continue the game and then pause again, waiting for another signal.
- Make sure there is back and forth communication throughout movements and you are not simply entertaining your child without requiring your child to stay connected with you by responding.

Getting in your child’s attention spotlight!
Avoid getting your child overaroused as follows:

- Pay attention to your child’s arousal level.
- Make the play softer, gentler, quieter as soon as you notice your child getting overly aroused.
- Sing calmer songs that calm your child down.
- Freeze the play for taking deep breaths or positive imagery.
- Redirect the play before your child shuts down or dysregulates.
- Once your child has calmed down, don’t be afraid to increase your enthusiasm and optimize your child’s energy level again.
Connect with your Child through Music

Many children on the Autism Spectrum are more responsive to music, even if they don’t react to the sound of your regular voice. Songs can be the first place your child begins to pay attention to you, use words, and join in activities with you. Here are some tips to using music and songs to teach your child about communication.

• Sing songs slowly and repeat often.
• Pair your song words with gestures, large motor movements, and other sensory stimulation such as rocking, jumping, or clapping.
• Choose short songs with a small number of familiar words repeated over and over. For example, sing “row, row, row your boat” and mimic a rowing action.
• Sing face-to-face.
• Adjust song’s number of words and actions to child’s communication level.
• Pause songs and offer your child turns with words and actions.
• Make up songs using your child’s name and other family member’s names in your songs.
• Use song picture cards so your child can choose the song to sing.
• Use instruments and props such as a toy drum, tambourine, or harmonica when singing.
• Introduce pretend play into songs. (Example: Use puppets to sing.)
• Remember to say “all done” when the singing is over.
• Remember these old stand by songs: The Wheels on the Bus Go Round and Round, If You’re Happy and You Know It, Ring Around the Rosy, Old MacDonald Had a Farm, Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star, and Humpty Dumpty.

Facilitating Children’s Social Learning: Parents as “Social Skills Coaches”

Describing and prompting children’s friendly behaviors is a powerful way to strengthen children’s social skills. Social skills are the first steps to making close friendships. The following is a list of social skills that you can comment on when playing with your child or when your child is playing with a friend. Use this checklist to practice your social skills coaching.

Prompting
- “Your friend is looking for yellow blocks. Do you think you can find her a yellow block?” (praise child if s/he tries to help and/or point to yellow block)
- “You did that by accident. You can say ‘I am sorry’ to your friend.”

Modeling Friendly Behavior
- Parents can model waiting, taking turns, helping, and complimenting, which also teach children these social skills. For example, “I’m going to be your friend and share my block with you.”

Parents Promoting Emotional and Social Competence in Young Children

Parent-Child Social Coaching:

Child Developmental Level 2

Children in Parallel Play: Young children start out playing with other children by sitting next to them and engaging in parallel play. In the beginning, they do not initiate interactions with other children or seem to notice they are even there. They may not talk to them or offer an idea or interact with them in any way. Parents can help promote peer play by prompting their children to use social skills or to notice their friends’ activities or moods. Providing children with the actual words for interactions, or modeling social behaviors will be important since children may not yet have these skills in their repertoire.

Children Who Initiate Play: Young children move from parallel play to play where they are initiating interactions with each other. They are motivated to make friends and interested in other children. Depending on their temperament, impulsivity, attention span and knowledge of social skills their interactions may be cooperative or at times conflictual. Parents can help promote social skills during peer play by prompting and coaching them to use skills or by praising and giving attention to social skills.

Peer Social Coaching

- Prompt your child to notice what another child is doing or to help a peer or sibling.
- Help your child understand that when she/he shared or helped, the other child felt happy so she/he can see the connection between his/her behavior and another’s feelings.
- Encourage play dates with a friend.
- Praise your child when she/he initiates interactions or notices what a peer is doing.
- Use social coaching instead of asking questions.
- Prompt, coach, and praise your child’s friendly behaviors whenever you see them (e.g., sharing, helping, taking turns, being polite, apologizing, compliments).

“Your friend is looking for a red block, can you help him?” (prompt)

“That’s so friendly. You are sharing your cars and waiting your turn. Your friend looks happy.” (connect behavior to feeling)

“You are both helping each other like a team.”

“You waited and asked first if you could use that. Your friend listened to you and shared.” (connect behaviors to positive outcome)

“You both worked together to put those blocks together. That was great cooperation.” (enthusiastic response)

“You could give your friend a compliment and say, ‘I like your picture.’” (prompt and model words)

Spotlight your child’s feelings
SPOTLIGHTING

Emotion Coaching

- Try to think about what your child might be feeling and wanting.
- Describe your child’s feelings (don’t ask her what she is feeling because she is unlikely to have the words to tell you).
- Label your child’s positive feelings more often than his negative feelings.
- When naming uncomfortable feelings such as frustration or anger, point out and praise the coping strategy your child is using: “You look frustrated, but you are staying calm and trying again.”
- Cuddle and soothe your child when she is hurt or frightened. Stay calm yourself to provide extra reassurance.
- For children who are non verbal, use visual pictures of feeling faces to teach feelings and for child to show you how he feels.

“You look proud of that drawing.”

“You seem confident when reading that story.”

“You are so patient. Even though it fell down twice, you just keep trying to see how you can make it taller. You must feel pleased with yourself for being so calm and trying hard.”

“You are forgiving of your friend because you know it was a mistake.”

“I am having fun with you and am excited about your discoveries.”

Spotlight your child’s feelings!
Describing children’s feelings is a powerful way to strengthen their emotional literacy. Once children have emotion language, they will be able to better regulate their own emotions because they can tell you how they feel. The following is a list of emotions that can be commented upon when playing with a child. Use this checklist to practice describing your child’s emotions. You can also use the feeling cards to ask children to show you the picture of their feelings.

Tips for Using Puppets with Children

Preschool children are working to accomplish the important developmental milestones of learning friendship skills including beginning to share, help others, initiate social conversations, listen, and cooperate with others.

One of the ways to promote your child’s language, social and emotional skills is through the use of puppet play. Puppet play is effective because it encourages imaginary pretend play and helps children experience the feelings of other characters (early empathy development) as well as practice important conversation skills.

With puppets, dolls, or action figures you can act out stories, make up fantasies, and explore solutions to pretend problems. You may be nervous at first using puppets, but try it out and before long you will experience the joy of entering into your child’s thoughts and imagination, one of the most intimate places you can be with your child at this age.

Here are a few things to have your puppet do when playing with your child:

Puppet Scenarios

- Puppet models greeting your child. For example, “Hi I am Tiny Turtle. What is your name?” When your child tells your puppet his name, puppet thanks him for being so friendly. (Modeling friendly social greetings.)

- Puppet models interest in your child. For example, “What do you like to do?” When your child tells your puppet his interests, puppet shares his interests (learning how to get to know someone). You can also prompt your child to ask the puppet what s/he likes to do? (Learning how to show interest in someone else.)

- Puppet asks for help. For example, “I can’t get this block to go together, can you help me?” When your child helps your puppet, your puppet compliments his helping behavior. (Learning to ask for help as well as how to help a friend.)

- Puppet shares his emotion. For example, “I am embarrassed because I can’t ride my bike. Do you know how to ride a bike?” Ask your child what the puppet is feeling. Encourage your child to say something to make the puppet feel better. (Learning to express emotions and think about another person’s emotions.)

- Puppet shares something with your child. For example, “I see you looking for green blocks, would you like my green block.” (Modeling sharing.) If child takes your puppet’s block, say “I’m happy to help you.” (Connecting sharing action with emotion.)

- Puppet waits for his turn. For example, “I am going to wait until you finish that game, then can I have a turn?” If child gives your puppet a turn, puppet thanks him and tells him it makes him feel happy to have such a friend.

continues on back
SPOTLIGHTING

Tips for Using Puppets with Children, Cont’d

Note: If your child does not have the language skills to respond verbally to the puppet, it is still good for the puppet to model the words involved in the social interaction. You can also structure interactions that involve nonverbal responses from your child. “Would you share that with me?” “Would you like to shake the puppet’s hand?” “Can you help me build this tower?” This way, the focus is on your child’s friendly behavioral response to the puppet. You and the puppet can provide the verbal structure. This will support your child’s eventual language development in these social situations.

Parent Praise: Parents can use a silly/different voice for the puppet character and then go out of role as parent to praise the child for his or her social skills. Look for opportunities to comment and praise your child when she waits, takes turns, helps, offers a friendly suggestion or gesture, asks for help, shows interest or empathy, gives you eye contact, responds to your puppet, or listens well to your puppet.

Parent Prompts: In these puppet plays parents can prompt their children’s appropriate social responses by whispering in their ear some ideas for what to say to the puppet.

For example, “You can tell the turtle puppet you like to play with trucks.” Or, “You can say please can I have that book?” Don’t worry if your child doesn’t use your suggestion, just move on to something else as this is not a command. Sometimes your child will copy your suggestion or words and then you can praise him or her for such nice asking or sharing.

Remember: Keep it simple, have fun, and do not have your puppet model negative behaviors.

Scenarios for Teaching Children Emotional Self-Regulation Skills

Emotion coaching helps build children’s emotional literacy so they can begin to articulate their feelings to others. This is a foundational step to being able to eventually regulate their own emotions. Once children are starting to recognize and express their feelings, parents can begin to teach them some self-calming strategies. Because children are visual thinkers and love imaginary play, it is effective to use stories, puppets, pictures and practice role plays to help them practice calming thoughts, positive visual images, deep breathing, coping self-talk and using words or gestures to express their feelings and needs.

Here are a few things you can do with your child using the Calm Down Thermometer handout and Tiny Turtle puppet. Each of these scenarios would be done in one 5-minute setting and at different times when your child seems relaxed and interested in some puppet play. Try to keep these scenarios simple, fun and imaginative and follow your child’s lead.

Puppet Scenarios

Tiny Turtle Explains the Calm Down Thermometer

- Tiny Turtle puppet introduces the Calm Down Thermometer and explains how it works. For example, “Hi I am Tiny Turtle. I want to tell you about this amazing feeling thermometer which can measure your feelings.” Your turtle puppet can tell your child he is feeling sad, mad, worried or frustrated. Or on the other hand, happy, calm, relaxed, or proud. While Tiny is telling his feelings, point to the place on the thermometer that shows Tiny’s feeling. (Red or hot for angry versus green for cool or calm.) You can also ask your child to point to the color on the thermometer or move the arrow to the place that represents Tiny’s particular feeling. When your child points to the place on the thermometer you can add to the fun by asking him or her to show you that feeling face.

Tiny Turtle explains How the Thermometer Works

- Ask your child to practice taking deep breaths with Tiny Turtle and let him or her move the thermometer arrow down from red to green.

Tiny Turtle asks your child to tell a time he or she felt angry or sad or excited or safe. (Use a variety of comfortable and uncomfortable feeling words.) For example, Tiny asks, “Have you ever had someone make fun of you? How did that feel?” When your child shares a situation, help him/her move the arrow to how he/she was feeling and then move the arrow down as deep breathing is practiced.

Using the Calm Down Thermometer, Tiny Turtle asks your child what feelings the faces on the thermometer represent. For example, “See these feeling faces on this thermometer, what feelings do you think they are?” When your child names a feeling praise their understanding and ask them to show you that feeling face.

“I took three deep breaths and practiced smelling a flower and blowing out a candle. Then I came down into blue.”

Ask your child to practice taking deep breaths with Tiny Turtle and let him or her move the thermometer arrow down from red to green.

Tiny Turtle asks your child to tell a time he or she felt angry or sad or excited or safe. (Use a variety of comfortable and uncomfortable feeling words.) For example, Tiny asks, “Have you ever had someone make fun of you? How did that feel?” When your child shares a situation, help him/her move the arrow to how he/she was feeling and then move the arrow down as deep breathing is practiced.

Using the Calm Down Thermometer, Tiny Turtle asks your child what feelings the faces on the thermometer represent. For example, “See these feeling faces on this thermometer, what feelings do you think they are?” When your child names a feeling praise their understanding and ask then to show you that feeling face.

Tiny Turtle Explains How to Calm Down

Tiny Turtle explains how he recognizes an uncomfortable feeling and says “stop” and goes into his turtle shell to take deep breaths. For example, “One time someone stepped on my foot, and I was mad, but I said “stop” and went in my turtle shell and took deep breaths like this. Then I felt better.” Ask your child to practice this with Tiny Turtle and either imagine he has a magic turtle shell or put her head under her shirt.

Tiny Turtle explains how he uses his happy place visualizations when he is in his shell to help him calm down. For example, “When I am nervous I think about a time I learned to ride my bike and felt really proud. Or, when I am afraid or sad I think of my teddy bear and that helps me feel safe.” After Tiny has explained his happy or safe places then he can ask your child where his/her happy place is and how your child can use this when in his/her turtle shell. This exercise can help your child develop some positive imagery of things to think about when in his/her shell.

- Tiny Turtle explains what he says to himself when he is in his shell. For example, “When I am in my shell I say to myself, I can do it, I can calm down and try again.” Ask your child to repeat these words with Tiny and do it together.

- Tiny Turtle asks your child when she/he could use their Turtle Power. Then Tiny asks your child to show you how he/she uses Turtle Power. For example, “What makes you angry? So you are up here in red on the thermometer, how can you get yourself down here in green?” Praise your child for showing you or Tiny how to take deep breaths, think of their happy place, or use positive self-talk.

NOTE: Remember when using Tiny Turtle to follow your child’s lead and ideas and praise his or her willingness to practice taking deep breaths, using happy place memories and positive self-talk. Make these play scenarios fun, imaginative and interactive.
Building Children’s Self-Regulation Skills

- Coach and praise your child’s self-regulation skills such as staying calm, being patient, trying again when frustrated, waiting a turn, and using words or gestures when frustrated.
- Support your child when (s)he is frustrated, but recognize when (s)he is too upset to listen and just needs space and time to calm down.
- Encourage your child’s practice of calm down steps with puppets, books, and games.
- Model and prompt your child to use words, feeling pictures, or puppets to express his/her needs and feelings (e.g., “Show me the card with the face of how you are feeling.”).
- Help your child learn ways to self-regulate such as using a special stuffed animal or blanket, taking deep breaths, telling himself/herself (s)he can calm down, waiting, solving a problem.
- Use picture prompts to cue child to wait, take deep breaths or take a break.
- Model self-regulation skills yourself, such as taking deep breaths, positive self-talk, or taking a break.

“You can think of your happy place.”

“Can you pretend to use Tiny’s secret shell to take deep breaths & calm down?”

“You did a good job using your words to talk about your problem. That’s what friends do.”

“That is so strong to use your waiting muscles.”

“Let’s check the Calm Down Thermometer and get into the blue zone.”

Praising Your Child
& Tangible Rewards

Praising Your Child

• Prompt your child’s attempts to interact with others and praise him/her for gesturing, talking, sharing, making eye contact, and working together.
• Give labeled and specific praise for target behaviors immediately & consistently.
• Praise with smiles, eye contact, enthusiasm, and gestures.
• Give pats, hugs, and kisses along with praise.
• Praise your child in front of other people.
• Combine praise with social and emotion coaching methods.
• Be sure to get in your child’s “attention spotlight” by facing them directly and then praise with lots of smiles.
• Combine praise with a tangible reward for targeted behavior (e.g., hand stamp, sticker, physical activity, crackers).

Tangible Rewards

• Keep reward program simple.
• Break down behavior into small steps—be realistic.
• Use spontaneous, inexpensive spontaneous rewards (stickers, crackers, hand stamp, extra story before bed).
• Get appropriate behavior first, then give reward immediately.
• Gradually replace tangible rewards with social approval.

Think about rewarding yourself. Have you ever used an incentive system to reward yourself for accomplishing difficult tasks or goals, like completing a difficult project, or working hard as a parent? Think about ways you could reward yourself for your hard work as a parent, and list below.

Good Incentives for Me:

Examples:
A walk in the park
Tea or coffee with a friend
Warm bubble bath
Do yoga

Goal:

I will commit to doing something positive for myself this week. This will include:

Limit Setting & Redirecting

To Do:

• CONTINUE to play with your child using coaching methods, praise, and pretend play scenarios.
• PRACTICE using warnings, reminders, and redirections when possible, and keep instructions simple and clear.
• USE visual command cards for children who are nonverbal.
• IGNORE one negative behavior you would like to decrease.
• PRAISE the “positive opposite” behavior to replace the negative behavior you wish to decrease.
• RECORD your experiences on the Record Sheet and bring to next session.

Teaching Children to Understand and Follow Instructions

The key strategies for promoting children’s understanding of words when giving them instructions:

• Before speaking, get your child’s attention with eye contact.
• When possible give a transition warning about an upcoming behavior change.
• Give simple instruction (e.g., all done with the timer, give me the phone please) and wait briefly for expected response.
• If no response, quickly follow through and help scaffold the child’s response with a gesture (point to phone) or prompt child’s compliance by whispering a response (say, okay, while taking the phone away).
• When your child complies to instruction, give a powerful reward and redirect to another activity (“Thank you, let’s go find your favorite book to read”).
• Continue child-directed narrated commenting.

Limit Setting

- Keep limit setting simple and avoid unnecessary commands or complex instructions.
- Set one limit at a time.
- Be realistic in your expectations and be developmentally appropriate.
- Use “do” commands or positive and polite instructions.
- Limit use of “stop” or “no” commands.
- Use visual command cards for children who are nonverbal (e.g., wait, stop sign, sit, toilet, brush teeth, etc.).
- Give children ample time to respond.
- Give warnings and transition time when possible.
- Give children choices whenever possible.
- Strive for simple, predictable routines and use visual prompts as needed.
- Praise and reward compliance to instructions.
- Use distractions and redirection when possible.
- Strike a balance between parent and child control.
- Ignore child’s oppositional behavior.

Spotlight your child’s successes
Promoting Your Child’s Optimal Social, Emotional & Language Development

- Play frequently and provide social and emotional coaching.
- Label and reflect your child’s feelings.
- Structure your child’s day with a predictable routine for mornings, naps, meals and bedtime.
- Set clear limits when needed to keep your child safe.
- Help your child prepare for transitions or changes in routine.
- Have a predictable routine for leaving your child and reuniting.
- Give your child choices when possible.
- Share your love and praise frequently.
- Spotlight your child’s positive behavior with enthusiastic praise.
- Redirect your child’s negative behavior when possible.
- Ignore tantrums and give back attention as soon as tantrum stops.
- Take care of yourself by getting support from others and doing things for yourself.

SPOTLIGHTING

Positive Discipline Helps My Child Feel Loved and Secure (Summary)

- Schedule times daily to engage in interactive child-directed play using prompts and modeling to get your child’s attention and spotlight the social behaviors and language you want to encourage; remember you can maximize your child’s learning by using these strategies during meals, bedtime routines and your other caregiving routines.

- Use descriptive commenting narrations, pre-academic, persistence, social and emotion coaching strategies during child-directed play times.

- Use physical sensory routines, praise and salient rewards to motivate your child’s interest in using targeted social skills.

- Teach your child self-regulation skills using puppets, books, and imaginary play.

- Teach your child how to follow instructions and use reminders, redirections, distractions and choices to pre-empt misbehavior.

- Withdraw your attention and ignore misbehaviors that are not hurtful to others or to themselves; return your attention just as soon as a positive behavior is used.

- Pace yourself one step at a time.

Remember every time a negative behavior is not reinforced but instead the positive opposite behavior is rewarded with your attention and coaching, a productive learning opportunity has occurred. In fact, every interaction with your child is a potential learning opportunity.

Getting in your child’s attention spotlight with positive discipline to help them feel loved, safe and secure!
Ignoring

- Avoid eye contact and discussion while ignoring.
- Physically move away from your child but stay in the room.
- Be prepared for testing.
- Be consistent.
- Return your attention as soon as misbehavior stops.
- Combine distractions and redirections with ignoring.
- Choose specific child behaviors to ignore and make sure they are ones you can ignore.
- Limit the number of behaviors to systematically ignore.
- Give more attention to the positive opposite behaviors you want to encourage.

Getting in your child’s attention spotlight with positive discipline to help them feel loved, safe and secure!
Stay Calm While Ignoring

When you first start ignoring misbehavior, the behavior will get worse before it gets better. It is important to be prepared to wait out this screaming period. If you give in to the tantrum, this behavior will be reinforced and your child will learn that by crying and screaming loudly, he or she can get his/her own way.

It is important to stay calm while ignoring. Try to think ahead and brainstorm ways to remain calm when ignoring misbehavior.

Ways to stay calm while ignoring:
- Take deep breaths
- Practice relaxation techniques
- Think positive thoughts
- Walk away
- Turn on some music

Remember, it is normal for young children to cry, bite and hit to get what they want. This is not personal but a reflection of their lack of verbal skills and inability to use social skills to get what they want.

Goal: I will commit to tell myself the following _______________________
_________________________________________________________________

when my child misbehaves.
Using Differential Attention: Sometimes, children will show positive and negative behaviors during the same activity. For example, a child might follow directions (positive behavior) while whining or fussing (negative behavior). Differential attention is the technique where a parent praises the positive behavior while ignoring the negative behavior. For example, a parent might praise the child for following directions, and pay no attention to the whining or fussing behavior. This way, the child learns that she will receive positive attention for some behaviors, but will not receive attention for other behavior (e.g., whining).

When Would Differential Attention be Effective?

Think about some situations where this kind of differential attention could be effective.

For example: When my child is following directions but not looking at me, I will praise his/her cooperation and ignore the lack of verbal response.

Goal: I will commit to praising ________________________________ behavior while ignoring ________________________________ behavior.

Behaviors such as throwing tantrums, whining, pouting, ignoring you, and screaming are good candidates for ignoring. These behaviors are annoying, but they never really seem to hurt anyone, and the behaviors will disappear if they are systematically ignored. The ignoring technique should not be used, however, with behaviors that could lead to physical injury or property damage, or intolerable disruption of an ongoing activity.

Parents often have trouble controlling their anger when dealing with misbehavior or a child who ignores their requests. This emotional reaction can make it difficult to ignore misbehavior or to praise compliance when it finally does occur. However, ignoring is one of the most effective strategies you can use, as long as it is used in combination with your attention and praise for the child’s positive opposite behaviors.

Child Behaviors I will Ignore

Example: whining

Goal: I will commit to ignoring ________________________________ behavior whenever it occurs. I will praise ________________________________ behavior, the positive opposite of the behavior I am ignoring.
Many family members find that in stressful situations they cannot maintain their self-control. Others report they suffer from chronic anger, anxiety, or depression, and they are easily set off by the slightest event. However, when parents allow themselves to become so overwhelmed that they overreact, the consequences can be unfortunate. Parents may say or do something they will regret. After they calm down, they may feel guilty and avoid dealing with the child for fear of repeating another episode. It is frightening and anxiety-provoking for a child to see a parent lose control. Also, the child learns to imitate these aggressive behaviors in other situations. These cycles of parental overreaction and avoidance make it difficult to deal with the child in a consistent manner. The best approach is to achieve a middle ground—for parents to not be so overwhelmed that they can’t respond or so upset that they overreact.

Upsetting Thoughts

“My child is tuning me out. This is getting ridiculous. He’ll never listen.”

“I can’t handle it when she tantrums.”

Calming Thoughts

“My child is more engaged with the object than with my words. My job is to stay calm and get in his attention spotlight. I can provide a learning opportunity.”

“I need to help organize his toys and only bring out 1 or 2 toys at a time. I can help him learn to pick up.”

“I can handle this. I am in control. She has just learned some powerful ways to get control. I will teach her more appropriate ways to behave.”

Thought Control

Researchers have demonstrated that there is a relationship between how we think and how we behave. For example, if you view the child in hostile terms (“She is misbehaving because she hates me.” or “He likes to get me upset.”), you are more likely to become very angry. On the other hand, if your thoughts emphasize your ability to cope (“I’m going to have to help her learn to control herself.”), this will help to bring about rational and effective responses. One of the first steps for improving the way you think about your child is to replace upsetting thoughts and negative self-statements with calming thoughts.
